Welcome back to Paradise! We are delighted to transport you to our idyllic shores through the pages of the Destination Magazine. Here you will find it all: the unspoiled powdery white beaches and sandbars that envelop you in nature’s caress; the grandiose resorts and villas celebrated by architectural digests and television productions; the transformative experiences that entreat you to make Turks & Caicos home, and the faces of those who make each moment of your time with us extraordinary.

They say that paradise is not a place, it’s a feeling. Globally, we are emerging from a humbling period of isolation and collective cabin fever which has heightened our appreciation of nature’s beauty. Our awareness to the importance of physical and mental wellness is magnified, and we are awakening to travel once again in search of well-deserved respite and rejuvenation.

We are proud to say that Turks & Caicos has experienced resilience at exponential levels since reopening our borders. In 2020, our #1 industry was stalled through a necessary border closure. Just a short time later, our islands boast busier months than pre-pandemic years. This is a testament to the love of service that the men and women in our industry possess.

Whether perusing these pages from the comfort of your home or here with us exploring our pristine islands, there is much to discover about the Turks & Caicos experience through the Destination Magazine. This edition of Destination takes you behind the scenes. Learn the inspiration behind the dazzling pieces in the shopping section. Get up close and personal with the people who make private sunset dinners and secret proposals magical. Take a look at the relationship between fisherman and chef, and the process that transforms fresh catch into a delectable dish at your dinner table. The allure of these islands will pulsate from the pages of this piece of work as you discover what awaits you here.

If you are in search of the best that Turks & Caicos has to offer, you have landed at the right place. This is your premier guide to these ‘beautiful by nature’ islands and the roadmap to making your vacation dreams a reality.

On behalf of the Board of Directors and Members of the Turks & Caicos Hotel and Tourism Association, we wish you good will, good health, and good island vibes.

Thank you for choosing the Turks & Caicos Islands!

About The Cover

By: Sonia Simmons

Boasting the most luxurious accommodations and unrivaled beaches in the world carries with it much more than those breathtaking scenes that the eye sees. Behind the resplendence of these ceremoniously celebrated properties and shores are hardworking teams dedicated to providing an experience that is unrivaled in any other destination.

Within these 40 islands and cays, one can find everything from quaint resorts to luxurious penthouses and even more lavish private villas. Maintaining the theater of extravagance is no elementary task, but devoted industry professionals behind these scenes work arduously to bring the unexpected and unimaginable to life. Sometimes unsung, the pages of our magazine seek to highlight those masters in their fields; the housekeepers, pilots, villa managers, mixologists, catamaran captains, beach attendants; dive instructors, greensmen, chefs, wedding planners, and more.

PACKAGING PRODUCT PARADISE

By: Cynclair Musgrove

Come with me on a magical journey
Where memories are made by the score
Where myriad experiences await you
On land, on sea or along the shore.

We were the world's best kept secret
Hidden unintentionally in plain sight
We were mistaken for our neighbour
Folks never seemed to get us quite right.

Miles of powdery white sand beaches
Turquoise water looking like Listerine
Liquid sunshine on very rare occasions
Make our visitors come again and again.

The process of packaging a paradise product
Takes hard work, incredible skills, and artistry
Destination TCI is synonymous with luxury travel
The golden goose known as TCI’s Tourism industry.

Our brand is mainly five-star accommodations
Private villas, hotels, many family resorts
Once locals were bar boys and waitresses
Now they hold key positions as they ought.

From wage workers to the self-employed
From taxi drivers to VIP chauffeurs
Flickscreen, land, air or sea excursions
TCI Islanders are becoming entrepreneurs.

Made in TCI – a renaissance is trending
Locals are discovering their true worth
Artisans, farmers, designers, entertainers
Run the gamut from making rum to t-shirts.

Thanks to Bêché, Giggles, IGA, Coca Cola or Jai’s
We no longer rely solely on sun, sand, and sea
Authentic local options enrich stores island-wide
Providing the ultimate high-end shopping spree.

For the ultimate fine dining and exotic cuisine
TCI pairs international chefs with local proteges
Big chefs and Lit’l chefs at Seven Stars or Grace Bay
Food festival fund raising is the TCI way.

Imagine catching fresh fish from waters so deep
Then having it for dinner that same night
Prepared by your own hands or in the local restaurant
From sea to table—what an authentic delight!

For lovers of nature there’s an array of historical sites
That connects our future with our past
Slave plantations, bodies of water and relics well preserved
Keep history current and offers an experience that will last.

Scuba diving and snorkeling are popular still While kayaking and kite boarding are relatively new
Whale and bird watching have great appeal
On Salt Cay and Middle Caicos these are options too.

The Turks and Caicos Islands is a small archipelago
We’re connected by boat or by airplane
A day trip to a family island or one of our cays
Is easily and efficiently prearranged.

Many tasks are completed without seeing a face
Every request is performed to a tee
Technology and social media are accessible to all
Though designed to respect everyone’s privacy.

The wellness practitioners at TCI health spas
Focus on keeping well inside and out
The body is a temple and treated as such
You’ll be pampered with world-class service no doubt.

Do you wish to escape to exchange wedding vows?
Dream of saying “I do” amid thrills sans the fuss?
You can count on our masters and mistresses of calm
These service professionals keep at bay the chaos.

So, whenever you choose to take your next trip
Be it a family vacation, honeymoon, or retreat
Leave the planning for pleasure to professionals
The process of packaging a paradise product is complete!

COVID lockdowns in 2020 triggered a wave of personal development projects that have left many of us more rested, fit, and adept than before. The same can be said of TCHTA members in the accommodations sector where owners, general managers, and partners implemented dramatic renovations, expansions, and team trainings that have taken our industry to even higher heights. Featuring luxurious properties that routinely top the lists of regional and world-leading rankings is no small feat in a globally competitive market known for resort excellence. Behind the deck extensions, gleaming new tiles, fresh paint, and award-winning architectural collaborations are the managers of the boutique and large-scaled resorts and villas that work with global leaders in luxury to elevate the experience of staying in Turks and Caicos.

Touring a few properties that have raised the bar across this archipelago, our first stop is for a chat with Beverly Howell, the General Manager of Point Grace Resort, member of the Small Luxury Hotels of the World. This intimate boutique hotel unveiled a partnership with New York-based firm Young Huh Interior Design for an entirely new design perspective. “Refurbishing the resort’s poolside cottages, several oceanfront suites, the restaurant, and the public spaces, the design partnership with Huh adds a youthful and modern edge to Point Grace while maintaining the resort’s British West Indies heritage and style.” Howell says. Using the down time of restrictions on travel to add a few final touches to its facelift, Grace’s Cottage, the resort’s French-inspired restaurant, showcases a brand-new bar & lounge, terraced seating areas and new landscaping, all framed by a 25-foot Bisazza glass-tile mosaic wall that stretches across the length of the space.

Shay Papke, head of Marketing at Ports of Call Resort, guides us on the next stop of our show-and-tell tour of renovation reveals. She says of the dramatic facelift to the landmark Grace Bay strip property, “We are proud to announce that our multi-million renovation project is now complete! "Guests staying with us can enjoy upgraded rooms, hallways, pool area and shopping plaza. We are excited to provide guests with a better experience than ever before. Whether your travel purposes are for business, leisure or pre/post alternative accommodations, the improvements are sure to increase satisfaction during your stay in the Grace Bay area.” Sporting new coastal-chic floor tiles, room entrances and bathrooms doors, are just a few of the detailed upgrades that upend any worry that more modest room rates reflect less commitment to luxury and comfort.

The grandest additions are futile if safety amidst an ongoing pandemic is not utmost priority. TCHTA Members being proactive in their response to COVID-19 protocols over and above suggested health and safety guidelines to ensure their guests experience total peace of mind is a no-brainer for our resort and villa managers.

Wilbert Mason, Ocean Club Resorts General Manager, has overseen the implementation of strict health and cleaning guidelines through PPE proactivity and deep sanitation techniques that seek to ensure guest safety form arrival to departure. Of the abundantly cautious approach Mason says, "Industry leading cleaning and sanitizing protocols are used to clean guest rooms, with particular attention paid to high-touch items. Pool seating has been configured to allow for at least six feet of separation between groups of guests.

These disciplined approaches to combat potential threats to guest health and safety are a focus of not just Ocean Club Resorts, but a theme throughout all member properties.

Kirk Aulin, General Manager of The Meridian Club on Grace Bay says, “As a small hotel on a small private island set on over two miles of beachfront and shared between so few guests, in addition to the cleaning protocols we diligently adhere to, we are very fortunate to have many natural advantages which make us the ideal safe getaway this year.”

“It isn’t easy being at the top. Redefining and sharing Caribbean luxury with a travel-hungry world starved of the riches of these islands takes more than just building it so that they come, but keeping them safe once they do. Under the leadership of the ever visionary and vigilant managers of TCHTA Member properties, don’t worry, you’re in good hands."

You would never guess by the way the world is talking about us that these tiny islands and cays make up one of the smallest countries in the Caribbean with just a little over 40,000 inhabitants. In spite of our size, we are a formidable presence in the world of tourism. Lush islands with glass-like turquoise water, immaculate shorelines, welcoming natives, sumptuous dining, and a soul-stirring cultural vibe make Turks & Caicos the unrivaled destination it is.

A search of any travel hashtag will inevitably land you on a smorgasbord of #turksandcaicos posts because our destination experience caters to all, and checks the marks of any type of traveler. Family stories depicting a 10-bedroom villa take-over and reconnecting after enduring unbearable distances in the advent of COVID litter flood the most prestigious travel blogs and review platforms. Celebrities exclaiming they have ‘discovered’ Turks & Caicos, sharing drone footage of our secret sandbars and uninhabited cays can be found across social media platforms. Stories of famed travel writers returning to Turks & Caicos post-lockdown and experiencing the islands again like it was their first time are featured in leading travel magazines.
Solo travelers are taking their experience to their YouTube channels and sharing with the world that even a lone traveler can have the vacation of a lifetime in the Turks & Caicos Islands.

What is it about these tiny islands that compels such immediate love and connection to anyone that touches these shores? Turks & Caicos waters are undeniably stunning. It takes only the aerial view from an airplane’s window upon descent to see that the country seems carved out amidst blue brilliance. While many often wonder if the magnificent photos and videos they’ve seen are doctored, travelers are left in awe that those images simply do not do Grace Bay Beach justice.

If there were any doubt, travel enthusiasts need only rely on the global authorities who have bestowed the highest accolades on Grace Bay Beach and other beaches in Turks & Caicos. Take a look at the results of TripAdvisor’s Best of the Best, World Travel Awards, USA Today’s Best, Conde Naste Reader’s Choice, and you will see Turks & Caicos has held its #1 position for years.

In the advent of the pandemic, the tourism industry came to a screeching halt and would-be visitors were unable to escape beyond the borders of their hometowns. There was a global feeling of cabin fever, a pent-up demand for a return to normalcy, and a much-needed respite from the lockdowns. When the doors to the Caribbean swung open, there was a myriad of sunny islands for travelers to explore as they sought to be close to nature again. Overwhelmingly, they chose Turks & Caicos.

More than just an idyllic option, the country proved its commitment to making the health and safety of guests and residents top priority. Protocols implemented by our Ministry of Health have now positioned TCI as a front-runner of safe destinations, marked by the World Tourism Travel Council Safe Destination Stamp. Regional dashboards show the country’s clear commitment as we are one of the most largely vaccinated populations in the Caribbean, and our COVID numbers have been consistently low.

The world has noticed. Arrivals to the destination since the reopening of our borders have surpassed pre-pandemic numbers. Despite more travelers choosing Turks & Caicos for their island escape, these magical islands are still a best-kept secret and provide the quaint, exclusive feel that a true Caribbean getaway should.

Turks & Caicos is at the top spot of the bucket list of any traveler dreaming of a getaway to a place that delivers on all fronts; perfect weather, endless miles of clear azure waters, pillowy soft white sand beaches, welcoming people, exceptional service, an inspired culinary experience, and a culture that is felt in each facet of the travel experience.

Allow us to welcome you to this fascinating slice of paradise, where hospitality, health and safety are our priority, and even our dolphins are friendly! Come, and visit our “beautiful by nature” Turks & Caicos Islands.

Dining

Come, and take a bite out of paradise. Though best known for our crystalline waters and luxurious accommodations, Turks & Caicos is quickly becoming a stand-out destination for exquisite culinary experiences. An intriguing delight for any traveller is the opportunity for immersion into the local culture in every sense of the spectrum. Undoubtedly, each country is set apart by its native cuisine, and our local dining experience is indeed divine.

Combining the freshest local catch with sensational native ingredients and the culinary prowess of the finest culinarians, one can imagine the sublime delicacies that are the result of such an ideal medley.

Uniquely, alongside our Turks & Caicos master chefs are the budding talents that will be the future of this country's culinary landscape. Learn about the magical experience of these collaborations and the harmony of the relationship between a local fisherman and Executive Chef that leads to the spectacular epicurean journey our guests enjoy.
Sweat pours from the brow of the focused maestro, chopping an onion like her fingers are mechanical whilst coldly calling orders to the well-tuned team, she’s in the zone, feeling the buzz of pressure, and ready to feed some people – that is until she wakes up from her dreams and has to get ready for her teenaged apprenticeship with the Lit’l Chefs program. The chance to shadow a head chef as they lead a team into the old familiar battle of the lunch and dinner hunger wars has been a TCHTA initiative of immeasurable success and heartwarming results over the years. Culinary school isn’t an option for all aspiring chefs, but passion for food and talent for cooking can come from anywhere. Pairing noted chefs at restaurants across the island, like the executive chef at Seven Stars Resort, Edwin Gallardo, along with junior chefs from high schools and the community college, the Lit’l Chefs program impacts the lives of local culinary aficionados in dramatic ways. Though international exhibitions, magazine photoshoots, and airport receptions fit for returning war heroes are the perks of triumphing at seizing opportunities in the program,
17-year-old Jaleah Ferguson says it’s the confidence and character building that truly enlightened her mind and helped blaze her path. “It’s like going to the army in a way, but supportive and patient. It taught me professional discipline, organization, process, creative expression… balance. It taught me a lot.” Learning on the job, in the kitchen, not just to cook but to work amongst teams where high-pressure environments require steady, reasoned heads and a focused mindset is a reality for all Lil Chefs. “There’s a maturity that comes with the territory,” Ferguson says. Before you even realize it, working with the team, learning from “Chef”, you start to feel a lot more confident and skilled.” Those skills and calm temperament still give way to the youthful energy that Executive Chef Edwin Gallardo believes adds to the flavour of the kitchen in a positive way.

“Lit’l Chefs always get us energized, its gives us a chance to recognise some miniature superstars that brings hope to our culinary industry. They are the future and we’re here to mentor and guide them, Gallardo says proudly. “Like Inga Stubbs for example, she is a very well-groomed culinarian now. She comes to Seven Stars as a part-time pastry cook while going to community college. It’s been a privilege to see stars like her grow in the field. This program helps us mold the young culinarian into the trained professional with our mentoring and guidance as seniors in the industry.”

Still, there’s a bigger goal at play. Cultivate a well-defined palate distinctly known in international culinary circles as the definite Turks and Caicos style, and the ‘scene’ creates a bigger platform with more opportunity for talented lil’chefs. Blending cultures both endemically inspired and regionally influenced, the program has a long-term impact of fine tuning the true voice of the Turks and Caicos identity in every culinary arena. As cultures clash and combine on the plate, younger chefs are unconsciously writing the story identity evolution in this country with each experiment they undertake with their new training.

Cultivating our Lit’l Chefs to grow into the executives that eventually decide the menus that reflect what this country is all about, is a job that Chef Gallardo takes seriously.

Speaking of gaping opportunities ready to be filled by Gen Z chefs in the kitchen as the restaurant industry expands and foodies become hungrier for different experiences, Gallardo says, “We will no longer be in crisis of finding culinary forces to drive our TCI into becoming a culinary destination.” Take it from here, folks. The Lit’l Chefs of today, are the Executive Chefs of tomorrow. Just you wait, and taste.

Let David Attenborough narrate the voice in your head as you descend to the ocean floor in a crystal clear, underwater world. Following a time-honoured and indigenous journey, we're here to document the process of marine life swimming happily in the open ocean before landing in melted butter and freshly squeezed lime on your plate. Seriously, here in the Turks and Caicos, we know that commercial overfishing is a global problem of enormous scale, depleting fish stocks worldwide and dragging millions of ‘unusable’, endangered species like bottlenose dolphins to unnecessary ends as bycatch in the football stadium-sized nets of huge commercial operations.
Thankfully things are done differently in this country where our local fisherman, the last bastion of centuries-old traditional work, have long dived for the catch one-at-a-time, hand by hand, throwing back live catch that does not meet the strict regulatory guidelines set by government and enforced by the Department of Environment & Coastal Resources (DECR). You probably know by now that the waters that surround these islands are some of the richest, healthiest stretches of ocean on earth. With abundant sunshine for coral reef spawning and the ideal conditions in our mangroves to incubate all six of the major TCI delicacies – grouper, snapper, tuna, mahi, lobster, and conch, we beg pardon from our vegan friends as we bring our catch to the surface in the next step of its journey to the dining table.

For the best example of how fresh local fish arrive on your plate, the annual Wine Cellar Golf and Fishing Tournament is a can’t miss weekend of activities (mostly focused on fishing) that raises tens of thousands of dollars for local charities each year. On the Saturday of the three-day weekend tournament, charter boats and local fishing vessels line up at a designated marina to weigh their catch and seize their glory after a healthy fishing competition and months of back and forth trash talk. Massive wahoo, barracuda, yellowfin tuna, and Nassau groupers weigh down the scale in competition as a delighted crowd whoops, gasps, and hollers at the increasingly heavy numbers.

Once they disperse and the theatrics die down, head chefs from restaurants across the island make their way down the galley to scenes of prize winning (and losing) fish being cleaned and prepared for eagle-eyed bystanders and even pickier family members of the crews. The calm chaos of live negotiations, quiet winks, hand signals, and silent bargains being made amongst familiar chefs and captains, is a snapshot of how seafood is purchased by restaurants on a daily basis. This is a sustainable model, employing dozens of local fishermen, retaining stocks of prized fish at scientifically recommended healthy levels, and delivering to market the highest quality product where demand for the classics never really dwindles.

On the way to their final destination, lobsters and red snappers alike are brought fresh, never frozen, to the kitchen which makes a distinct contrast in taste and texture. Ocean water from the Caicos Bank season-salts the fish before chefs even wield their knives and begin carving, this gives the ultimate dish an unmistakable freshness that is nearly impossible to artificially recreate. We'll call it Poseidon's pre-prep. When Turks and Caicos chefs finally get to do their bit, what happens? Well, that's when our seafood truly comes (back) to life.

At SUI-REN, the fine dining sushi grill serving the freshest sushi and Asian inspired dishes at The Shore Club on Long Bay Beach, Chef Martin Davies takes inspiration for the name of the restaurant in his approach to the sea-to-table process. Named for the Japanese word for water lily, Davies says, "We use only the best seafood and organic produce in a style that is the first of its kind in Turks and Caicos." Set in an inspiring dining environment, the elegant yet comfortable space is the perfect place to be transported back to where we began, under the sea where the seafood on your plate, now rolled into mouth-watering sushi concoctions, swam barely the day before.

These are the types of mystery boxes that even the world's best chefs would salivate over. Every day is catch-of-the-day in a country where there's such a healthy and steady supply of local seafood. The challenge for culinary artists like Andrew Mirosch at Wymara in crafting weekly seafood nights that exceed hard to impress foodie expectations, is not in adding bells and whistles to the subtle and sublime base of a mutton snapper a fisherman from South Caicos caught that morning. No. Ask Mirosch and he'll tell you it's about restraint. Pairing subtle and complimentary flavours with the real diva of the dish; seafood so distinctly fresh that upon taking that first bite into it, a diner suddenly feels like King Triton himself.
BLT Steaks at The Ritz-Carlton Turks & Caicos offers refined dining in a bistro-styled setting with ultra-sleek modern décor. The restaurant displays a bold combination of classic and contemporary, accentuated with locally handmade ornaments for a meticulously curated fine-dining atmosphere. Featuring its signature quality cuts, the restaurant brings a true steakhouse experience to the island with its premium offerings of 100% naturally raised USDA quality certified Black Angus beef. BLT’s blackboard menu is the star of the restaurant, showcasing a mouthwatering selection with daily featured specialties.

BLT DINING

Executive Chef Luis Duarte adds a masterful spin to the traditional menu, tantalizing pescatarians with his Lobster Cobb Salad or Dover Sole, and wooing vegetarians with his innovative plant-based cuisine. With no compromise in taste or quality of experience, the chef and his team cater to the dietary needs of all guests to complete satisfaction.

Delectable desserts, creative creations for children, and the welcoming staff add to what makes dining here a must for all Turks & Caicos travelers. Located just beside the Ritz-Carlton Casino, the BLT Steakhouse is open for dinner 5:30 pm to 10:00 pm daily and welcomes in-house and outside guests. Reserve your table today by calling (649) 333-6861.

With its combination of classic steakhouse comforts, fresh seasonal salads, handcrafted cocktails, and exceptional service, this new addition to the Grace Bay strip provides a first-class culinary adventure at every sitting. For the ideal pairing, enthusiasts will be impressed with the restaurant’s array of Old and New World wines on display. A palate-pleasing wine is the perfect compliment to a BLT prime cut served in a cast-iron cocotte.

Complementing its time-honored fare with the island’s salt water delicacies, BLT provides an elevated twist with a generous selection of fresh seafood and seasonal dishes highlighting locally grown ingredients. Though known for its steaks, a BLT Turks & Caicos dining experience caters to all guests, no matter their affinities.

The Underwater Explorers

By: Jayne Baker
It’s the end of an exciting morning of SCUBA diving and as the boat heads back to the dock, the call of ‘dolphin!’ is heard from the helm. The captain slows the vessel to watch a mother and her young charge cruise past, much to the thrill of the guests on board. The juvenile dolphin, energetic and curious, breaks away from the matriarch and streaks toward the boat. Visitors who were strangers a few hours ago now stand arm in arm, squealing with delight each time the signature dorsal fins break the surface. The guides on board smile at each other. It’s just a regular day on the water in TCI.

On any given day, at any given moment, the tantalizing turquoise waters of the Turks and Caicos are a visitor’s playground. There is no need for make believe here - the ocean is the main attraction, and these islands offer a smorgasbord of airborne, wave powered and subaquatic activities to get you on, and under, those cerulean seas.

As Aladdin pitched to Jasmine - are you looking to experience a whole new world? If so, there’s no better way to immerse yourself than to take the plunge with a SCUBA dive. TCI’s lush and plentiful underwater world, bursting with a myriad of marine life, dazzles both first timers and salty pros alike. Not so sure about descending to the depths? There’s plenty to see from sea level itself! Slip on a mask and fins to experience spectacular snorkelling or slide onto a paddle board or kayak and let one paddle stroke after another transport you to tranquility. Looking for something a little more fast-paced and adventurous? Wake boarding, jet skiing or e-foil surfing might be your calling. Or maybe you prefer a breathtaking, birds-eye view of this little piece of paradise and want to fly high with a parasailing adventure. Those looking to experience the thrill of hooking the ‘big one’ can jump on board with one of many TCI fishing excursions, and let’s not forget, nothing quite says ‘Caribbean vacation’ as sipping some rum punch while the sun slips seemingly into the sea itself. A sunset cruise can be the most perfect way to end a day of fun in Turks and Caicos.

No matter your activity of choice, there’s no better way to spend a day in TCI than exploring its rich marine environment, and the people that bring you these tours are as diverse as the activities itself. Turks Islanders come together with workers from all over the world to provide visitors with amazing ocean experiences. You might find yourself in conversation with a local guide whose great grandfather fished these waters, or perhaps another guide will be sharing stories of diving in their home country half a world away. No matter where they hail from, a cultural mosaic of individuals is drawn together by a singular calling - a connection to the ocean itself. It would be tough to find a group of people more passionate about these waters. When tour guides aren’t busy leading a trip, you might find them engaged in environmental advocacy and conservation work, keeping up with the latest scientific discoveries, or simply sharing some ‘sea-stories’ with friends and visitors alike.

Those that work in TCI’s water-sports industry will tell you that the days can be long and the responsibility great, but that the pay offs come in many invaluable forms; incredible marine encounters, endless opportunities for fun, and the simple peace that being on and around the water brings - just to name a few. But sharing the magic of these waters with our visitors, and watching the ocean transform strangers into friends? Well, that’s just priceless.

The Magicians

By: Dominique Rolle

People love the wild. Top down, off-road adventure. Cosmic exploration. Unleashed dancefloor fun – it’s there, the wild in us. Our Members treat activities like local chefs treat fresh snapper – kicking with spice and unique island flavour (but we’ll save that for the culinary section). Knowing that activity options form such a crucial part of the Turks and Caicos trip, our collective of Members bake Island experiences that are packed with a diverse range of ingredients. From deep space exploration to 3D light and laser shows, they aim to satisfy a deeper appetite for life, connection, and adventure.

Sea and sand are just the base, goes the recipe – jumping off a menu that practically dares you not to have an epic time here in Turks and Caicos. Sea doughnuts on a jet ski? No problem. Dancing all night on a 3D dancefloor (…on the best beach in the world no less)? Coming right up! Gliding through baby shark, turtle, and fish populated mangroves as dinosaur looking egrets circle above! Bon Appetit.

Each epic experience is hand-rolled by a good vibes chef of sorts, artists in their respective fields, whether as scientists or working-mom entrepreneurs. From right here in these Islands and all over the world, the Members behind all the fun are passionate professionals that are focused on constantly opening new gateways into paradise.

Starlight, in this light polluted world, is the focus of a camping experience at the rurally located Amanyara. Out there in the sweeping wetlands of the Northwest Point Marine Park, where the exclusive resort lies, a series of summer camps for 5-10- and 11–14-year-olds (yes, jealous) brings world class scientists Phillip and Patricia Frost from the Museum of Science in Miami to host SEEK (Science Explorers and Environmental Keepers) camps, perhaps most excitingly, a session called Sun, Moon and Stars. “The session takes advantage of the extraordinary cosmic sights visible at night on that end of Providenciales”, Ana Fonseca, Director of Sales & Marketing at Amanyara Resort, says. They offer young star lovers a chance to, “explore the interesting properties of the Sun and Moon and how they impact life on Earth before launching into the science of the stars, including how we can use light to search for life on other planets.” With a startling clear view of the universe as their muse, camp goers stargaze whilst learning fascinating stories behind the constellations before mapping and modelling them in taught methodology.

A bit closer to home, our Members find particularly interesting ways to make a good vacation great through nighttime guest experiences. Take Tajuana Rashida Ewing, the dynamic local entrepreneur behind FlickScreen Events.
Her futuristic, innovative products and experiences incorporate everything from LED curtains to LED Infinity Dance floors that make you feel like you're in a fun, dancing version of Squid Game.

Ewing has had to overcome more than a few hurdles to make the Mobile Movies, stage concert shows, weddings, and corporate events she services an in-demand success. “Being one of the first women in this traditionally male dominated industry has really set me apart and created a whole different level of demand in the entertainment industry on island.”

Big Blue Collective has led the nation's ecotourism industry for over 25 years with its renowned experiences on, in, and under the water. Co-founder Philip Shearer brims with praise for his team of dynamic eco-tour guides. “Our vision to create and more importantly deliver superior experiences to meet and exceed those expectations has always been underpinned by dedicated hard work, attention to detail, and most importantly, safety and training; staying up to date whilst allowing our senior guides and captains to help nurture the younger newer guides.”

“We constantly assess ourselves and guest feedback to see how and where we can improve. To that end, we never stand still. This in turn means that when we are on the water, we are ready for everything and can focus on allowing nature to present her gifts so that we can share and showcase the best of Turks and Caicos Islands natural beauty.”

That’s the thing, they are all good at it. The boat captains, the SUP tour guides, the jet ski operators and golf pros, all capturing the natural essence of TCI in a way that’s a sort of indescribable. The grand simplicity of these islands, found in the quietest of moments and ephemeral locations like sandbars and meteor showers, are explored through activities that are led by professionals deeply passionate about how nature and tourism intersect. Truly, what could be more elusive and spectacular than the milky way expanding into the universe, sparkling in what feels like just-reach-out-and-touch-it clarity. That’s a Turks and Caicos magic, that truly is our pleasure to share with the world.

Luxury by design...Relaxing by choice

Business

While the term “hospitality industry” often immediately conjures images of resorts, dining, and tourist activities, there are many essential layers that bring those components to life. In tandem with our distinction as a premier vacation destination for celebrities and traditional families alike, Turks & Caicos is a second home to many with key drivers constantly at play to assist in making it all happen. Behind the arresting buildings are the architects, shippers, and purveyors. Driving the engine for these remarkable developments are the financial institutions and law firms, and it all begins with the realtors and insurance providers. This treasured industry of ours can never merely be relegated to face-value. Whether or not they are traditionally thought to be, these critical supportive services are not only a part of the hospitality industry; they are undoubtedly the lifeline that supports it.

THE FACILITATORS

By: Dominique Rolle

Whilst these islands are often described as mystical, when it comes to the hidden hands that make the business of paradise function, our TCHTA Members, not fabled creatures, create the magic. Attorneys and airline pilots, logistics coordinators and delivery men, boat captains, finance specialists, and CEOs alike all work tirelessly to support seamless guest experiences, however far away from the beach their work may be.

Without these committed professionals, like the fabled unseen elves of Hogwarts or essential workers during the 2020 COVID lockdowns, the growing castle that is our economy would not continue to evolve, expand, or sharpen with sophistication as it does by leaps and measures each day.
“These are gifted, highly trained pilots, Turks and Caicos Islanders, and some of the coolest guys in town,” says Trevor Sadler of interCaribbean Airways. Speaking of the TCI pilots that service the company’s dizzying list of domestic and regional connections across the Caribbean, Sadler says, “Take for example Keish Thomas. Since day one with the jet he’s been a star. Before him and guys like Alano Forbes, we had to recruit overseas pilots with experience but once they came on board we started internally selecting team members with local flavour, the right number of hours, who were at the right place, at the right time. Now we have the first TCI pilot on a jet right here in the country.”

As easy as it is to write jokes about their profession, attorneys are no exception to the rule. Behind every new business venture, property sale, and company formation are the legal professionals like Gordon Kerr at Misick & Stanbrook and Neil Coles at Miller Simons O’Sullivan who ensure things are done correctly and in a timely manner.

Seemingly not a lot to ask, but alas, such service can be a luxury when a precarious deal hangs in the balance and needs a lawyer with experience and nerves of steel to carry it over the line. If castles really are your thing, its architects like Gregory Blee and Lee Halligan at the eponymously named design firm Blee Halligan that dream up and blueprint that sort of thing.

Nothing, in these islands at least, occurs by happenstance or magic. So, the next time you’re taking a ferry ride to North Caicos on a Caribbean Cruisin’ ferry, touching down on the tarmac in Salt Cay after a Caicos Express Airways flight, or stepping off a private jet and into the Blue Heron FBO, take a look around. Those aren’t elves you see those are people. Still perhaps we can agree...they actually are magic.

Sure, upon first strolling the Grace Bay strip, the savvy shopper might not immediately anticipate treasure trove filled alleys like Istanbul’s Grand Bazaar or designer-label packed streets like New York City’s SOHO District. A closer look will unveil the eco-friendly, ultra-luxurious, and heritage-rich products of the TCHTA members who define the Turks and Caicos shopping experience which are inimitably unique, stylish, and culturally significant.

The handmade local jewelry brand, Mythology TCI, is the brainchild of designer and Grand Turk native Codee Coalbrooke. Intricately beaded necklaces, bracelets, and trinkets tell powerful and beautiful stories of the heritage of the islands. “My goal is to tell the story of the TCI with each piece I create”, Coalbrooke says proudly. “I am consistently striving to highlight the beauty and sometimes untold story of each island in my pieces”, which she indeed does with stunning effect. Glistening emerald-coloured stones adorn tributes to the fertile “Green Island” of North Caicos whilst sparkling translucent pearls bejewel an homage to the eponymously named Salt Cay pieces. These tributes are what birthed the name of Coalbrooke’s business, “Mythology”, which she says conjures up a connection to the idea of traditional stories.

Then there is the luxurious swimwear and beach accessories brand Bēchē (pronounced ‘beachy’), founded and designed by daughter of the soil, Cyprianna Green. With delicious silhouettes, bold Turks inspired colours, and a unique local perspective, Cyprianna’s creations embody the very spirit of the TCI. “I draw inspiration from local culture and customs”, the designer says of her iconic swimsies which are quite popular with fashionable locals as well as well-heeled tourists. The colourful, custom prints of her brand are created by local artists and digitally transferred to fabric. Turks and Caicos culture is literally woven into the fabric of her pieces. Sold-out past collections have paid homage to the national flag and the coral reefs whilst her latest collection was inspired by the traditional TCHTA Boxing Day celebration, Maskanoo™.

To the delight of tourists and locals alike, The Wellington Collection brings to the Grace Bay strip a souvenir and jewelry shopping experience made almost entirely of real TCI sand, seashells, recycled and upcycled materials. As founder, 25-year-old Wellington Williams puts it like this, “I make jewelry from anything I can wrap, put a hole through, or set in resin”. This approach is consistent throughout his collections as the well-known designer and manufacturer who focuses on readily available and recyclable materials. Through the raw materials used, visitors can take home a bit of Turks and Caicos sand, sea glass, or repurposed treasure whenever they purchase from The Wellington Collection.

The journey continues with Jai’s, Turks and Caicos’ leading authorized dealer for fine timepiece and jewellery brands like Rolex, Chopard, Gucci, David Yurman, Breitling and more. For the savvy shopper looking to add to their collection of classics, Jai’s will provide all the arm candy and fine fragrances you desire. For more than 25 years, Jai’s has been the source for premium eyewear, watches, and jewellery, bringing these beloved brands to the local market. If you happen to be in the market for the perfect ring for a surprise proposal, you can be certain you will find the winning piece at Jai’s.

On the south side of Providenciales, on the way to famed spots such as Sapodilla Bay Beach, Taylor Bay Beach, or Chalk Sound, you’ll find Caicos Mart Ltd., a locally owned gas station and convenience store in operation since 2008. With a wide variety of items in store ranging from fishing reels and rods, auto related accessories, snacks, pharmaceuticals, beach accessories and even premium champagnes like Dom Perignon and Veuve Clicqout, it’s a must stop shop near the less commercially located beaches of the island.

As much as Turks and Caicos is known for its sun and sand, its unique world-class local shopping experiences should not be underestimated. The combination of inspiration drawn from the islands, the use of local materials, and local artists and designers that are inherently behind the brands, contribute to a bombastic range of quality products that, thanks to our global visitors, are then carried abroad and admired around the world.
Wellness

You live thousands of miles away and have never visited Turks & Caicos ‘til now, yet you find yourself on the powdery white sands of Grace Bay Beach staring into the eyes of the one you love about to say “I do”. What a wonder, right? Every year, hundreds of destination weddings are masterfully planned and executed in our islands. Brides (and grooms) trust the most important day of their lives to people they haven’t met and won’t come face to face with until they set foot on our shores just days before their big event. As you can imagine, this is not something taken lightly by these professionals who are expected to deliver a celebratory weekend that is nothing short of perfection. And this, they do expertly. They correspond for months or even years fine-tuning the requests and desires of these anxious couples. They arrange accommodations, venues, photography, and learn the needs of the family members and friends that will accompany the blushing bride and groom. They put every intricate piece of the puzzle together to fulfill the fantasy and they are there on that big day pulling all the strings and ensuring all anyone sees is the magic. They are the reason so many have chosen to start their journey to forever in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Wellness, the act of practicing healthy habits on a daily basis to attain better physical and mental health is the goal of not just surviving but thriving. A diverse group of our membership operate in the sphere and know quite well that in 2022 wellness is more important than ever to guests and residents alike. The choices we make in our preventative care, holistic wellbeing, pharmaceutical treatments, surgery, and post-op rehabilitation can be determinative factors in achieving general wellness throughout our lifespans, which are on average longer than ever recorded in human history. There has been a global awakening to the importance of making more conscientious decisions in matters of health. Whether you’re living in or simply visiting the Turks and Caicos Islands, it is important to familiarise yourself with choices that are more varied in option and uncompromised in quality than many would expect. We wish to instill confidence in our guests that here, in Turks and Caicos, holistic wellness is serious business.

Villas have become as viable an accommodation option as resorts or hotels, and there is no need to compromise on the quality or details of luxurious treatments and other off-site amenities. This relatively ‘new’ market has created opportunities for service providers in the arena of wellness.

Meryl Cooper, the owner of Spa Tropique, will tell you that offering mobile spa treatments directly to customers wherever they’d like - be it at a villa, remote beach, or the highest point on the island of Providenciales, Blue Mountain - makes all the difference in a guest’s experience. The spa menu offers a variety of choices. From the classic Swedish, deep tissue, hot stone, and aromatherapy massages combined with highly skilled offerings in

The Practitioners

By: Dominique Rolle
Chinese acupuncture, Propolis Natural Antibiotic Ampoules and a whole range of decadent detoxes, Spa Tropique is committed to our guests’ wellness. Flamingo Pharmacy situated in the IGA Plaza on Leeward Highway in Providenciales is another. Andre Forbes, Business Development Manager, reminds us that the choice between accessing life-saving prescriptions and vacationing in the home of the best beach in the world shouldn’t be a dichotomy. With their global stock of both over-the-counter and prescription medications, it isn’t. Given the nature of the massive shift in pre- and post-travel testing for COVID-19 since 2020 and ongoing, creating a one-stop-shop where guests can easily and quickly access accurate testing at the same place that they may need to refill an urgently required prescription or shop for everyday essentials, cosmetics, workout boosters, or feel-good supplies simply makes sense.

“We offer everything from diabetes education, weight loss and body composition advice, blood pressure checks and blood sugar readings. For diabetics, or any other person living with chronic illness and visiting the Turks and Caicos Islands, we are the place to go.”

Then there’s Omnicare Medical where Dr. Dawn Perry and Dr. Rufus Ewing lead a team of medical professionals that specialize in family medicine, obstetrics, gynecology, and surgery that ranges from ENT and orthopedics to urology and plastic surgery. Again, you don’t have to choose wellness over relaxation, or health over luxury. Dr. Perry says of the multi-skilled practice, “Our family medicine physicians provide holistic, comprehensive and quality primary care services to the entire family from prenatal care of mothers to newborns and seniors. As the Omnicare Medical Center obstetrician and gynecologist, I work along with the team to provide top-quality care that is tailored to each patient’s needs and wishes in not just that area, but overall. Our general surgeon is well trained and works in collaboration with several surgical sub-specialists such as ENTs, Orthopedics, Urologists, and plastic surgeons to provide a comprehensive range of surgical services.”

In the unfortunate event that you did have to undergo surgery, think of recovering in Turks and Caicos as a silver lining and natural rehabilitative aide with our vitamin-packed sun and turquoise seas that locals have long claimed possess healing properties. If island legends aren’t quite your thing, Spa Tropique, Flamingo Pharmacy, Associated Medical Practice, Physiologic Physical Therapy, Grace Bay Integrative Medical, and Omnicare Medical Center through their spa and pharmacy, world-class surgeons, and general practitioners in almost every area of wellness treatments, have more than got you covered.
A cool breeze greeted Inez as she stepped outside into the morning dew to meet her neighbour, Ma Len. Since her mother’s passing when she was a young girl, the older women in the Creek had taken to raising Inez as their own, and Ma Len would usually accompany her into the field. As she arrived at the one-bedroom house, she noticed it was unusually quiet. She knocked hard on the wooden door which acted as the entrance. No response. She opened the door and entered, and heard a feeble voice calling to her. She rushed towards the bedroom and gasped as she saw her companion’s frail state. Ma Len’s face, beautifully tanned like leather, was pulled into a grimace. She was sick. Again.

The last time they had called for Doctor Forbes, four weeks passed before receiving a correspondence which simply read “Due to circumstances beyond my control, I am unable to come to North Caicos at this time. Please use the enclosed medication until we are able to send more.”

It was a constant battle to get medicine in the Caicos Islands, and there seemed to be no end in sight. Medication was expired or no longer needed by the time it arrived. It had cost Inez her mother, and she was not about to lose Ma Len. She knew she had to travel to Middle Caicos for a remedy.

It was an excruciating long walk even when the journey was happily undertaken, but today it seemed thousands of miles away. The sun pelted her with a vengeance, determined to convince her to turn back. Finding shortcuts had always been a special talent of hers, and she relied on one of her favourites to get her to the island faster.

Weaving through the bush with the cutlass she had brought along, Inez soon found herself wading through thick red mangroves bursting with birds, fish, and turtles as she trudged through them.
A whining sound vibrated in the air, and before Inez could prepare for impact, a dancing needle the size of a hummingbird landed on her arm. The mosquito moved like a ballerina before positioning itself for its final pirouette.

It would soon be noon, and she needed to hurry along. Ma Len had instructed her exactly where to find the Miracle Tree, and it would require all her effort to make it there and back in time.

Suddenly, there it stood, colossal in appearance, with a lone bumpy green fruit gloriously hanging from it. Inez was sure that Ma had told her the tree would be laden with fruit. The lonely 'Nooni', as the people of the Islands called the mysteriously powerful but awful smelling fruit, would not be enough, but what choice did she have? Stretching her hand above to pick the fruit, she gently manoeuvred it from the branch. She turned the fruit over in her hand, examining its unique structure. Inez knew she had to keep it safe. Ripping a piece from her garment, she delicately wrapped it and placed it into her cocoa sack.

Time seemed as distant from Inez as her body, almost floating above herself back to North Caicos in a crazed, hurried trance.

With fervour, she delivered the Nooni to the Bush Doctor. He begun to gently massage the soft fruit, squeezing its juice into a moon-shaped coconut shell. Warm water soaked the precious leaves of the fruit and was majestically poured into the shell. He offered the potion with steady hands to his patient, Ma Len.

A booming cough erupted. Sitting up, Ma Len held Inez’s face in her hands. Once again, the strange and powerful fruit had gifted miraculous rejuvenation.
Photography

Imagine an exotic vacation to the Turks & Caicos Islands with your very own paparazzi in tow! A bit much? Well, even if you aren’t in need of a photographer on retainer, a vacation in TCI is one to be forever memorialized and celebrated. Your death-defying jump from the famous Long Bay shipwreck, your solo photo “for the Gram” on a see-through kayak atop crystal clear waters, the day you say “I do” to your soul mate under a cotton candy sky on Grace Bay Beach or commemorating your joyous family vacation...they will be wherever you need them.

Our photographers are award-winning masters in their field and are the curators of the electrifying images that have enticed you to our shores. The stunning images throughout the pages of this magazine are evidence of their handiwork, as they move about our islands capturing its beauty through their lenses. Take a look and give them a call. You won’t be disappointed.
The company was born under water in 1999 when David and Anita moved to Turks & Caicos and would shoot video and photography for divers. As the islands grew in popularity, it developed into a destination for luxurious weddings and a great place for family vacations. Brilliant made the move to wedding videos and in April 2019, 20 years’ worth of island imagery gave birth to the first fine art photography gallery in the Turks & Caicos Islands, Brilliant Studios.

DAVID GALLARDO

Hailing from Barcelona, Spain, David has lived in Turks and Caicos Islands since 1999. Formerly a scuba diving instructor, David has a passion for the ocean and underwater photography. He has traveled to remote places around the world such as the Galapagos Islands, Indonesia, and French Polynesia to photograph coral reefs, sharks and crocodiles. David is a two time finalist of the Wildlife Photographer of the Year, an award given by the Natural History Museum and the BBC Worldwide. He also loves photographing waves here in Turks and Caicos. In July 2016 Anita and David bought Brilliant Studios and in April 2019 started their Fine Art Gallery on the island.

ANITA MARCUS

Born in the Netherlands to parents who loved to travel. Anita worked as a bank manager but always dreamt of exploring other countries and cultures. On one of her travels to Malta she took a scuba course, loved it, and became a scuba instructor. In 1995 she moved to Boracay in the Philippines, worked there for a year, and became an underwater photography and videography instructor. She then moved to live and work in the Cayman Islands before moving to Turks & Caicos in 1999. Anita has photographed scores of celebrities with her work published in Condé Nast Traveler, Martha Stewart Weddings, and many more international magazines. In 2001 she joined Brilliant Studios as a full-time photographer. In July 2016, Anita, along with David Gallardo, bought Brilliant Studios and in April 2019 opened their fine art gallery.
Paradise Photography is a full service boutique photography company with the only two Master and Certified Professional Photographers in the Turks and Caicos Islands. Its two principal image makers, Christine Morden and James Roy, are highly experienced, decorated, creative artists who are known for their unique fine art style of image making.

CHRISTINE MORDEN & JAMES ROY

Meet Christine and James, a husband-and-wife team and owners of Paradise Photography. Their love of photography and the Turks and Caicos brought them together!

Christine left her professional career in Washington, DC to pursue her passion of photography. This path led her to meet Master Photographer James Roy, owner of a successful Maryland based photography business. They fell in love and followed their dream of living on an island and building a successful photography studio together.

James and Christine travelled the world, and in the process fell in love with Turks and Caicos. They then decided to get married there and make it their home.

Fast forward nearly fifteen years later and Paradise Photography is one of Turks and Caicos’ premier photography studios and a proud recipient of Business of the Year by the Turks & Caicos Hotel & Tourism Association.

Christine and James believe in giving back to the community and educating the local youth. As the only Master photographers in the Turks & Caicos, they developed a photo intern and assistant program that helps mentor young people about photography. Paradise Photography also supports local charities such as the Salvation Army, AIDS Foundation, Cancer Society, Edward Garland Youth Center, to name a few.

Christine and James believe that having your picture taken should be a fun & enjoyable experience! Their commitment is to deliver beautiful photography with a personalized touch. Their motto is “to create photos better than you could imagine and that exceed your expectations.”

The Masters of Calm

By: Tiersa Hall

Turks and Caicos remains unmatched in its beauty and serenity. The clear turquoise water and pristine beaches of powdered sugar sand have helped to elevate our islands from an unknown destination amongst rural travellers to one of the world’s premier spots for destination weddings.

Despite the acclaim of our Tropic of Cancer location, and yes, even with the World’s Best Beach as a backdrop, the perfect destination wedding is incomplete without a flawless muse and a team of experts painstakingly overseeing the details of that magical day. The bride must be a vision of perfection and a cardinal rule fulfilled: the bride gets exactly what she wants.

To guarantee the ultimate experience, only the best will do. Sheque Perfection Hair & Makeup Artistry, NILA Destinations, Thea Makeup Artistry and Tropical Destination Management Company are TCHTA members that have built reputations of excellence in our luxury wedding industry. These providers strive for complete satisfaction for our couples and their beloved family members and friends.
Execution at this level isn't by happenstance. It is fueled by passions, skills, and experiences that drive these artists and entrepreneurs to deliver in a way that newlyweds need and deserve on their big day; in the detailed way that really matters. Our members aim for excellence behind these picture-perfect experiences, and we are delighted to share the stories of these master craftsmen (women) who are the leaders of the Turks & Caicos destination wedding industry.

Shenique Higgs, owner of Sheque Perfection Hair and Makeup Artistry, can be described as the Clairvoyant Spirit. Her passion was first fueled as a young girl working in her aunt’s hair salon and luxury boutique. While in college, she developed her skills in makeup artistry and as a result has developed a reputation for expertly reading the needs of her clients. 70% of her clients are brides she doesn’t meet until their wedding day, and their testimonials prove they are all satisfied clients. This is a testament not only to Shenique’s talent, but the natural gift she has in assuring that clients can trust in her to deliver the perfect look for their perfect day.

Inspired by the intricate makeup and accessories worn by the leading ladies of Bollywood movies, telling a story through beauty is Thea Gangasingh’s gift to the world. This Beauty Narrator has built an undeniable brand in destination hair and makeup artistry over the last 10 years.

While many can tell a story through makeup, Thea’s level of precision and commitment to depicting it in a way that leads from the heart is truly phenomenal. With keen attention to detail, Thea ensures that the scene, character and illustrations all come together to create the greatest love story ever written.
